Edinglassie School Pays Visit To Chronicle Office

The pupils of Edinglassie school, accompanied by their teacher Mr Grant Saul, spent Friday afternoon at the Chronicle office being initiated in the art and craft of printing. The whole process was demonstrated. A special four page illustrated paper—"Edinglassie Echo"—was printed and published during their visit. Each child taking a copy home, proud to know that something they had written about themselves was in that paper. Each child also helped to make a perforated leaf notebook, which they also took home, after having an ice cream and orange—Which rural school comes next?

Money More Plentiful

There is still money in the country. This was proved to the hilt at the Crittenden Sale. Though purchasers could buy for half cash, it is remarkable to note that without exception every buyer paid in full for his purchases.

Ribstone W.I. Notes

The regular meeting of the R.W.I. was held in the Municipal Hall April 7th at 2.30. President in the chair. Opened by the singing of O Canada and reciting Creed. Minutes read and approved.

The convention at Edmonton in June was talked over, and it was decided to send a delegate as usual. Moved Mrs. Crittenden—Mrs. Harri, that Mrs. Robt. Morrison be delegate. Carried.

It was decided to put on a play on our anniversary 21st June. Further announcements later. Our representative Mrs. J. Dulyin was asked to write to Mrs. Laseur our District Collector and invite her and as many friends as she wished to bring, for our next meeting May-5th to be held at the home of our President Mrs. McCrea at 2.30 p.m. A full attendance is requested. Members will please furnish lunch.

The members of the W.I. have decided to buy a car of four—turkeys, ducks, geese, and chickens this fall. Everybody outside are also requested to join in with us. Full information may be obtained from the president Mrs. McCrea or either of the directors, Mrs. C. Barton or Mrs. Brewster, all Ribstone P.O.

The Ribstone W.I. are giving prizes for the children of the three schools—Old and New Ribstone and Crest-hill. Competition to start 1st May. Close 1st Saturday in October to children 8 years and under, for the two books: 5 to 10 years for best hand-writing; 10 to 12 years for best scrap books, said books to be sent to sick childrens hospital; 13 to 15 best drawing. Separate prizes will be given each school and a special prize for best of the three schools. Scrap books to be made from building paper, size 8 by 12 inches and to contain 12 leaves or 24 pages. Boys and girls do your best.

A letter was received on Monday April 9th from the Dept. stating our annual speaker, Mrs. Stanch, would be with us on May 2nd. Mrs. Stanch is a graduate of Drexel Institute Philadelphia, where she graduated in Domestic Science. She will speak in the Municipal Hall Wednesday May 2nd at 2.30 p.m. Subject: "Make of patterns suited to different types of figures". A full attendance of ladies is requested to hear Mrs. Stanch and give her a hearty welcome and a pleasant time in Ribstone. Ladies are requested to furnish lunch.

THE GROWING TREES

There was a great improvement in the school yard last summer. We went out to the bush and got a great number of trees. We took a shovel and loosened the earth. Then we dug them. We put the trees in the ground and put more water on them. This summer we are going to put straw around them so that the grass will die and the moisture will stay in the ground—Edinglassie Echo.

LOCAL LAD WINS DISTINCTION IN THE SPORTS FIELD

Homer Segar, one of our local lads, who is now at college at Spokane, has won a unique distinction in the sports field. We are proud to publish the following extract from the columns of a Spokane newspaper, under the sub-heading "Segar is Surprize."

With a $2 to 15 score the Junior B class swamped this A class in the class meet held last Monday in the North Central Gym. Fred Mitchell and Nigel Culler tied for the first and second places at 11 1/4 points each. Homer Segar came third with nine points to his credit.

Homer Segar took first honors in the 440-yard dash with Lloyd Birkett coming in second. Segar proved to be the dark horse in the high jump when with a form all his own, he succeeded in tying for first place at an even-7 feet with Kenneth Church. With proper training Segar should be a hot winner for the track team. This is the first time Segar has ever competed in a meet of any sort.

ENDORSE CREAM I GRADING SYSTEM

Both Saultatchewan and Manitou have now endorsed the system of cream grading as followed in Alberta through their dairymen's conventions and it is likely that legislation will be introduced in the two provinces to endorse the system. Cream buying stations were abolished in both provinces over two years ago.

Speak clearly if you speak at all; carve every word before you let it fall.

Chauvin Rifle Club

A general meeting of the Chauvin Rifle Club will be held at H. N. Pigeon's office at 8 p.m., Saturday April 28th for the purpose of arranging dates for four competition shoots for prizes offered by the Dominion. All members are urged to be present.

Returns From Ireland

Mr. J. T. Goggin arrived home Friday evening after a very pleasant visit to his home at Cratlow, Ireland. He reports that cattle fetch a good price over there, instancing a year old stall feed beef that sold for $200. A beast that here sells for $50 would sell for $150 on the Irish market. He tells us also that the Free State Government is gaining prestige all the time, and he anticipates the troubles will soon be a thing of the past. Incidentally he mentions that taxes are high, about 35 per acre, but the farmers are prosperous.

Rene Page's House Burned

The residence of Mr. and Mrs Rene Page on First Avenue was destroyed by fire last Wednesday afternoon.

Only a few of the household effects and papers of importance were saved. Mrs. Page was out visiting at the time, whilst Mr. Page was engaged in fixing up the roof. A pot of tar on the stove boiling over was the cause of the outbreak. The prompt arrival of helpers with the fire-fighting apparatus prevented the conflagration spreading to the Police residence.

Mr. Page's loss which is heavy, is only partly covered by insurance.

Libby's Pumpkin at 50c per can, and choice Corn at 15c per can at Parcels & Foxwells.

WHEAT CROP NETS $40.00 PER CAPITA

Canada's 1922 wheat crop of 399,786,400 bushels produced a revenue of about $40 per head for every man, woman and child in the Dominion according to the Government Bureau of Statistics. The value of the crop amounted to $399,419,000, final results show. Of this total the three prairie provinces, which produced $375,140,000 bushels of wheat, accounted for $307,784,000.

Notice of Error

Sugar prices given in Parcels and Foxwell advertising should read as $2.75 instead of 25.50—the old advertisement having been repeated through an oversight. By an error last week Coffee was quoted at 20 cents per lb. in an advertisement of Sakers.

Priced advertisements in the Chronicle have been remarkably free from errors. But they will happen sometimes. It is but due to our readers and to the two advertisers that we call attention to these errors—Edie.

BARN DESTROYED BY FIRE AT THE KIRBY FARM

Fire destroyed the barn at the Kirby Farm on Monday last at noon.

Mr. V. Smith who is renting the farm was in town at the time of fire. No stock or horses were burned, as the harness was saved by Mr. Wilson. The cause of fire is unknown.

Sport fashions every day grow more amazing. These are Eton boys ready for the annual St. Andrew's Day sports which, to judge from the costume, will at least be not too ludicrous.

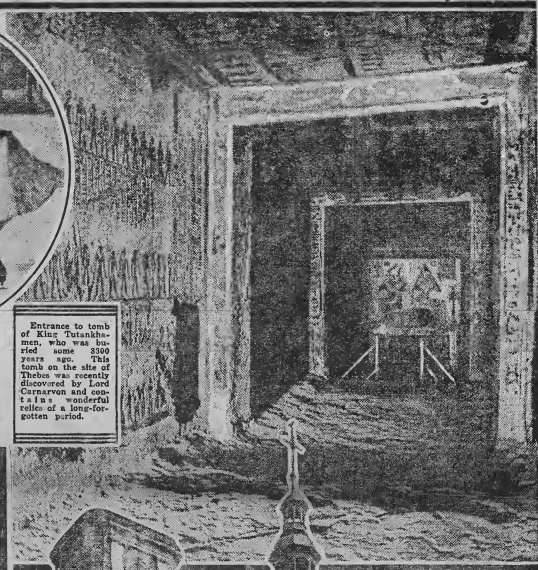

Waiting on the ice is above all things graceful. We may expect this sort of thing at Montreal, Quebec, Banff, and wherever else in Canada winter sports are the force.

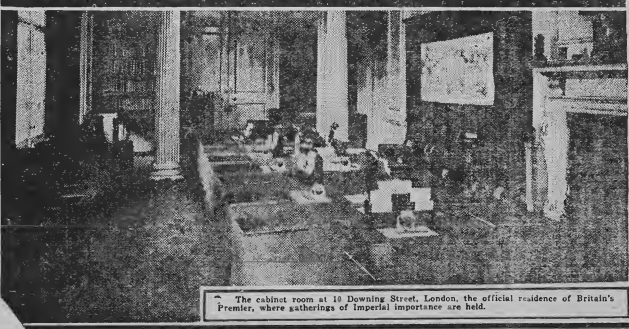

In British elections everybody is interested, even the youngsters, hence the very good imitation of the inimitable Charlie.

The palace of Cardinal Beign at Quebec. It adjoins the Basilica and narrowly escaped destruction in the fire. In the foreground is the statue to Bishop Lavall.

Entrance to tomb of King Tutankhamun, who was buried some 3300 years ago. The tomb on the site of Thebes was recently discovered by Lord Carnarvon and contains a wonderful relic of a long-forgotten period.

The cabinet room at 10 Downing Street, London, the official residence of Britain's Premier, where gatherings of Imperial importance are held.

A recent snapshot of His Excellency Governor General Timothy Healy of Ireland.

Quebec's 300 year old Basilica which was almost destroyed by fire recently. It will be rebuilt at once.

Everything depends on point of view. Beauty is in the eye of the beholder. You couldn't convince a mouse that a black is unattractive.

A girl who keeps a man at her feet work when everyone else has gone to a football match.

The worst of trying to settle down is that there's always so much to be fault-finding a woman does the more expert she becomes at it.

OUR SHORT STORY

THE CLEVERNESS OF ISABELLE

(By Agnes Miller)

"Isabel Miller did you really design his costume for the waitress committee? You certainly are the cleverest girl!" exclaimed Emily Wailing, taking a gay apron from Isabel's work table and holding it up for inspection. "Yes, isn't she clever?" chorused an admiring circle of prospective volunteer waitresses for the supper both at the street fair that was to open that afternoon for the benefit of the new children's hospital. "What should we ever have done without Isabel's brains? "The town of Ruxton would just have to go hungry," declared Emily "With the Ladies Auxiliary suddenly limiting our whole committee to ten dollars for costumes, and the committee one and all insisting on looking positively stunning on forty cents a piece, we'd have had no supper booth at all if Isabel hadn't remembered at the very last minute that it can be the very latest style to be old fashioned." "Emily never stops talking nonsense!" protested Isabel, laughing. I am ever so glad you girls like my humble efforts to be artistic and thrifty simultaneously, but I can't take credit either for inventing red and white checked gingham or Mother Goose." Isabel's polite depreciation of her own achievements did not, however, check the affectionate and indeed deserved praise of her companion. The bright apron, simply cut and with wide strings, had quaint borders of black paper silhouettes of Mother Hubbard and her dog, of Jack Horner, Miss Muffet and other gastronomic heroes and heroines of classic fame, and, though the garments were smart and original they had cost only a trifling Worn over a plain white dress, with a red and white paper mobcap like the sample lying on the table, the apron would uniform for supper booth attendants. In many ways Isabel was clever indeed.

"Well, girls," she resumed in the lively, slightly ruthless manner that had won for her such a reputation for enterprise and judgment, "you've approved the cap pattern, and I've given you all the instructions sent by the Ladies Auxiliary. Now you absolutely must all go home and rest for the afternoon. Emily and I will attend to finishing the caps, and we'll bring them down to the booth later."

"Isabel!" he there on, you may depend on it too, even if I feel has to carry them all down in her arms," declared Emily, as the girls began to take their leave.

"Oh, dear! Well, I would for the fair But think how dreadful it would be to be mistaken for a milliner's girl!" Isabel laughed and tossed her pretty head. "Now, Emily," she continued briskly, turning to the hall closet for her hat as the door shut after her callers. "If we go right down to Hortons and order the wire frames for the caps, they'll come up on the noon delivery truck, and that will allow us plenty of time to make the cap up, as they're so simple. Shall we start then? Do I look alright without a coat?"

"Yes, indeed. It's too warm for one."

"It's really too warm to have to go downtown into these stuffy shops," said Isabel as the two friends walked

BY AN OLD-TIMER

TO LLOYDMINSTER IN 1906

Yes, we were "greenhorns" in those days. A neighbour showed us how to assemble the new plough—and even he was better at pointing and waving his hand.

Well, we had from three to twenty feet of snow that winter, and the mean temperature for January was "minus thirty"—which is to say that it went below "minus fifty" every night during that month. One man's cattle starved because he could not find his stacks, though he knew about where they were in the creek bottom and was an "old western rancher."

We were two bachelors, and had been smoking the bark pulled off the dry logs which formed the walls of our "boudoir" (pronounced "bugwalk") for three weeks, when we decided that a trip to town was necessary. We went willows over the wagon-box, and tied a tarpaulin around them and called it a "prairie schooner!" Our sleighs were manufactured from the native poplar and having no shoes, it is not wonderful that their feet did not track. (The design is one of the "lost arts"—not even King Tut having anything at all like them.)

We loaded ourselves with sourdough, porridge and treacle, and began that fifty mile furrow through the snow. It was about forty as the trail went, but those who have travelled around twenty-foot snow drifts will not question the distance.

By night we were just eight miles from home as the crows flies, having crossed the river, and arrived at a two by four shack. The stable was just measured for the owner's four oxen and a cow. So we pushed the team of sixteen-hundred Clydes in and shut the door with a prop. We slept beside the kitchen stove, and exactly one hour after lying down the fire was out, and a pall of water beside it told soiled to get a drink. (Prohibition.) So we sat up and stocked all night.

Going to the stable first thing, we found it was "minus fifty" outside and "fever heat" inside—so that the walls were bulging out, and we opened the door to avoid an explosion.

The next night we slept in a stable and ruined the oatsheaves sent out by an experimental farm for seed. (We happened to be two of us, or this would have ended the story.)

Well, we had seven days of this, only getting thawed out the night we slept at the hotel. The country was beautifully level, the only trouble being that the snow would not hold up a sleigh, and the depth of a hole is only discovered after getting in too far to turn. This is naturally joyful, but the temperature was as cream.

Yes, we got home again, with a few groceries and some "baccy" AND the first mail and papers for nine weeks.

Those who are coming this spring, noting the vast fortunes we have made (with envy) may fail to understand that we did not achieve our present luxurious condition without some privation.

Perhaps some other "green horn" will pen us a little yarn. Our editor is an "old-timer" himself, and as King Lear says:

"I have sold your bread and salt I have drunk your water and wine, The debts ye did, I have watched beside,

And the lives that ye led were mine."

BY A LOCAL GARDENER

THE STRAWBERRY AND IT'S CULTURE

The wild strawberry is widely distributed throughout the world, and although the fruit is small it has a flavor preferred by many people to the garden varieties.

Varieties in cultivation are very numerous, most of them derived from the Chilean and Virginian species. All of them are good, but some are harder than others and therefore more suitable to our immediate neighbourhood. The varieties may be divided into two classes, Standard and Everbearing. Probably the best varieties bearing for this district are, Standard Varieties—Warfield (Imp), Settlor Dunlop (per) and Dr. Burri. Everbearing varieties are Progressive (per) and Superb (per).

Warfield is an old variety and very reliable, of robust growth and a heavy cropper. The berries are of medium size, smooth, dark red, and excellent for canning.

Senator Dunlop is a very popular variety of vigorous growth, hardy and produces a large quantity of big dark red, glossy berries, studded with large, red seeds which add greatly to its appearance. The fruit is of fine form and excellent flavor. These two varieties should be planted together for colonization.

Progressive everbearing (per) is a strong vigorous grower and a good drought resister. The fruit is medium sized, of medium flavor and nearly free from acid, making it a general favorite.

Superb Everbearing is a plant of low spreading habit, not as productive as Progressive, but producing larger dark red berries of excellent flavor from June till late fall.

Strawberry plants are divided into two sexes; small or bisexual and female or pistillate. The male varieties produce blossoms having both male and female organs, are self pollinating and will produce fruit independently of the female or pistillate varieties.

The blossoms produced by the female or pistillate varieties however have only female organs and will not produce berries unless they are grown in close proximity to bisexuals. There fore to ensure proper fertilization of pistillate varieties, every fourth row should be planted to a bisexual variety of the same fruiting season.

The standard varieties, generally have a short fruiting season. July or August and produce one crop a year. Should a late frost come along about the time they are in bloom, say in June, the crop for the season would be lost.

The Everbearing varieties, however are different in this respect, and it is a very important difference; should their first blossoms be destroyed by frost; the plants continue bloom and fruit continuously from about June until the end of September.

With other conditions right it would not be unreasonable to expect a good crop of berries in any ordinary season.

The strawberry succeeds best in a moderately heavy, rich and thoroughly drained soil, with a sunny exposure and sheltered from cold north or west winds.

EDGERTON ECHOES

EDGERTON ECHOES
E. P. Edgerton is back on duty again after a short vacation spent in Edmonton.

A very enthusiastic meeting of the Baseball Club was held in Gorgons Poolroom on Wednesday evening. The officers of last year were all re-elected and another successful year is predicted. After the close of the meeting, the Sports Club held their meeting and it was decided to have the 13th of June for our annual sports day. Several new and novel competitions are contemplated and it is the intention of the executive to have an entirely new program on foot for that day.

At a citizen's meeting held last week it was decided to again have Wednesday half-holiday's commencing on 8th of May and continuing until 15th August.

The Dort is running fine now and there has not been any more walking; but that is more than can be said of another good citizen who essayed a trip to demonstrate the possibilities of a certain make of milking machine. We have not the facts at hand but it may be that, for lack of a real cow for demonstration purposes, they hooked the contrivance on to the car and drained it of its motive energy. However, it ended all right after the distributor cap was put in place.

Kite flying is the leading sport in our burg and many are the antics of the various high-flyers.

Bill Hossock is quite chummy over his success of making a very presentable new front on the post office. It looks fine now, we hardly know the place.

We must be on our very best behaviour now that the city fathers have decided that the city must be properly policed. Chief of Police Doyle assumed his multifarious duties last week and we venture to gamble that if Chief Doyle puts his hand on a delinquent they'll go with him. But where is the hoose gov?

Formaline - Guaranteed 40 per cent. This is the standard of strength and any attempts at making it stronger would not result in a staple compound. It might however be weaker but this is what we are guaranteeing against. 32½c per lb any quantity. Bring in your own containers, as at this price we absolutely cannot afford to supply containers.

The Chauvin Pharmacy

We regret to announce the death of Fred Moore on the 19th inst., at the ripe old age of 82 years. The deceased was one of the early settlers and had lived for the past 14 years on his farm near the river. He was well known all over the district and notice of his death came as a big surprise for even in spite of advanced age he was very active and seemed to be in good health until recently. Deceased originally came from Hanover, Ont.

Considerable excitement was created in our peaceful burg last week when it became known that there had been rather a nasty spill on the railroad a mile west of town. An east-bound freight got into a mixup and piled up a number of loaded cars and the whole town, practically turned out in the evening to see the high wrecking cranes throwing loaded cars around. The following afternoon the track was cleared for traffic. Several cameras clicked copies of the debris.

Friday and Saturday were sure red letter days in the history of our city. Miss M. Coleman of Wainwright, was in Pawsey's store with her spring hats. All the young ladies of the town and district were there, viewing these creations of the milliner's art. And, oh boy, it was so nice to hear so many nice things as were said every time we tried on one of these creations. We never thought they could say so many nice things about us; but there, that's another story.

From all reports, we believe there is considerable moisture needed; if we are to have prospects for good crops. Several farmers report turning up dry soil while plowing. This is not a favorable indication. Why could we not get some of Manitoba's surplus water? Then we sure would have a bumper this fall.

ed along the street in the bright sunshine of a late spring day, "but it's just the right sort of weather for an outdoor fair, and I don't mind making an extra effort for a good cause, do you?"

"Some people have to stay in the shops all day—any kind of weather" remarked Emily, with a sapient air. She made no other reply to Isabelle's question, but Isabel, who was ready to be amused by one with a reputation for wit, did not notice any omission and laughed merrily.

"How bright you are today, Emily. So they do. But I don't believe they mind the way we would, you know, Salespeople couldn't possibly be sensitive."

"Isabel, you have a vast fund of useful, accurate, information," said Emily, gazing at her friend a little more fixedly than was altogether complimentary as the girls crossed the threshold of the department store. "I believe you even know where in this scintillating mass you can find hat

Of course Isabel knew. In two minutes the girls were at the right counter. The salesgirl, an attractive dark eyed young woman with a quiet pleasant manner, was very helpful and collected all the frames she had of the desired size. "You wish six in all? There are only fifteen here, I am afraid," she announced, for the sizes are broken because it is late in the season."

"I'll tell you what I'll do then," said the ingenious Isabel. I'll buy one more of the shape nearest to this and bend the wire so it will be uniform with the others." She glanced swiftly over the assortment. "Here's one I think will do, I'll just slip it on and see the effect." She snatched off her hat and laying it to one side, placed the frame on her head. "Oh, yes, this will be alright with a little bending, won't it, Emily? I'd like all these sent up on the noon delivery."

She removed the frame from her head and placed it with the fifteen others. The salesgirl turned for her order pad.

"Where are ladies' Blouses?" demanded a vigorous voice full in Isabel's face. She started and opened her eyes in wide surprise. The voice which came of a stout and hurried lady, repeated imperiously: "Blouses, I said Blouses, please! Where are they?"

Before the astonished and affronted Isabel could do more than gasp, the young saleswoman was in command of the situation. She stepped quickly toward the impatient customer and replied in a somewhat nervous and courteous manner: "Blouses, madam. On the third floor. Take the elevator to your right."

The lady turned toward the elevator without other acknowledgment than a glancing rebuke at Isabel, who returned the glance with one of disdain and then reached for her hat with an expression of disgust.

A feeling of amusement came over Emily, and she hastened to try to pass the episode as a joke. "Why Isabel, you must look as if you sell some thing; how encouraging for this afternoon! That customer; took you for a professional, my dear! Because her hat was off, I guess?" she hazarded pleasantly to the salesgirl.

"That mistake often happens when customers are trying on hats," replied the girl politely, but she glanced apprehensively at the still ruffled Isabel. "How ridiculous!" snapped Isabel distinctly and haughtily. "Send the frames to Miss Isabel Stewart, 9 Winton Avenue, at once, will you?"

"Certainly!" said the salesgirl, with her eyes fixed on the pad on which her pencil was travelling. Though she looked rather white, she showed no other sign of emotion. "Thank you, Miss Stewart."

"Well, that's done," announced Isabel in her ordinary tone of satisfaction as the two shoppers left Horton's. "I hope that girl really has sense enough to see that those frames do catch the noon delivery. You can never tell about those unintelligent salespeople. And how impossible some people are! What are you starting at, Emily? Have you forgotten that rude woman who took me for a store employee? Just fancy!"

"I was indeed astonished," admitted Emily, in tone that might have warned Isabel. "Your hair was so mussed, a—, you know 's—' employees as you call them have to be perfectly neat. What on earth did you insult that nice salesgirl for?"

Isabel blinked at Emily in amazement; she seemed so manifestly innocent that Emily almost groaned. It was plain that Isabel hadn't an idea of what a cruel snobbish blunder she had been guilty of—Isabel the clever who loved to give herself and her time and her brains to a community cause!

"I don't understand you, Emily," said Isabel, at last.

"When you said 'How ridiculous!' and you were pretty sharp, my dear—I suppose you meant the word 'ridiculous' for that unfortunate lady who 'took you for a shopgirl,'" explained Emily with patience; "but I'm afraid Isabel, that girl thought you meant it would be ridiculous for anyone to take you for—such a person as herself!"

"Why that's exactly what I think cried Isabel with decision, "though you know me too well, Emily, to suggest that I would be guilty of a personality. If people want to take general remarks personally, let them! It's embarrassing for me to be mistaken for some one who works in a store, and that's all there is to that."

"Would it embarrass you to be taken for some one who worked in an office or a school or a hospital? Work's work, isn't it?"

"Certainly, and perfectly respectable," said Isabel approvingly, "but you know that working in a store is quite different."

"Why?"

"Really, I don't know," Isabel at least was honest. "But everybody seems to think so."

"Now that you've finally said something that is partly rational," remarked the frank Emily. "A great many people undoubtedly do regard salespeople differently from other workers. I have devoted much thought to the reason, and, though I'm not considered below normal mentally so far I haven't guessed it."

"I tell you," suggested Isabel, leaping readily to a convenient conclusion, "selling isn't an intellectual occupation by itself. It doesn't attract the best type of mind. You have to have brains to be a good teacher or a trained nurse. Anybody can sell goods."

Emily knew better than to argue when Isabel had her blind spot turned on a topic. She wisely devoted all her energies to helping settle the last details for the supper booth and as a result of her efforts and Isabel's all the waitress committee were ready in ample time to serve the appetizing meal awaiting patrons of the gay little restaurant at one end of Town Hall Square on that day known as the "street of street-fair fame. All around the square were the countless attractions of the community benefit—booths for selling books, candy, flowers, vegetables and garden tools, the children's playground and the band. As the long bright afternoon wore on the crowd grew so large and merry that it seemed as if every citizen of Ruxton had come out to help the children's hospital.

"Even out of town people are coming too!" said the chief hostess, hurrying into the kitchen of the supper booth early in the evening. "Girls, the treasurer says that, if we take in money at this rate for two or three hours longer, the hospital's assured! Isabel hurry, dear! I've just seated an automobile party at your last table. They are passing through Ruxton and have stopped for supper."

Isabel hurried out in her best form her new customers were a good natured, agreeable group of friends who seemed much pleased with their surroundings. Two of them, girls about her own age, eyed her pretty costume appreciatively. The party gave a liberal order, which Isabel took down in her most businesslike manner, and then went out quickly to fill. She was delighted at being able to bring in so large a contribution for the hospital.

As she bore back her tray and placed it on the service table behind the two girls she could see they were still discussing their surroundings with approval. And as she set the coffee cups on their saucers she overheard a few words of the conversation.

"That's a good looking apron the waitress has on—so real novelty."

"It would be just the thing for the maids at our club luncheon next month. Exactly what I was thinking. Let's ask her where she got it."

"Well, do you suppose she'd mind? Would that be too personal?"

"Dear me, no, child? People in that walk of life aren't sensitive the way you and I are. Anyway, we'll tip her well. Why should she mind?"

It was Isabel's credit that, although she was shaking from head to foot with rage and humiliation, she proceeded to wait on the unwitting offenders and their friends to the best (Continued on Page Seven) of her ability. Ruxton needed his hospital, and strangers must be courteous treated. If they assumed that the waitresses were hired, that must be considered merely as a harmless mistake. With a scarlet face she took her position against the wall, awaiting what ever was to come—and looked straight into the eyes of the salesgirl who had sold her the hat frame that morning! With a small party of friends she was sitting at a table directly beside that of the automobile party.

Then Isabelle's blind spot, shifted and she saw in one brief instant how mistaken and stupid she had been in her attitude toward another girl and her chosen work. Here came and the salesgirl's ran parallel. Their two personalities had been ignored and affronted because thoughtless people had looked down on the valuable work they did; their feeling had been held of no account. Yet for the sake of business those feelings had had to be sacrificed and discourtesy had had to be courted received. Isabel swallowed hard. The next moment she heard the salesgirl's pleasant low voice carrying across the table.

"Miss Stewart! do you mind if I say what a wonderful supper booth you have? And they tell me you designed all the volunteer waitresses' costumes; is that so, They are charming!"

Then the girl too had heard, they indeed was magnanimity! Here too were tact, good sense and appreciation; could those high mental qualities be wasted in salesmanship! Isabel did not try to settle the point immediately, but she managed toammer gratefully a fitting answer to the girl. She was not astonished when her customers departed with most cordial comments on the splendid time they had had, but without asking questions or leaving tips.

Soon Isabel's rescuer too rose to go. Isabel hurried toward her. "Excuse, me" she said haltingly, "mayn't

I—I'd like to—" All smooth phrases forsook her. "I think," she said at last, looking straight at the other girl "that I owe you an apology for this morning as well as thanks for this evening. I made a bad mistake. Will you forgive me?"

"I understand perfectly. Please say nothing more."

"I must say one thing more, and that is that I'll never make such a mistake again."

"You wouldn't! Anyone can make a mistake; clever people don't repeat them."

The girl spoke with such friendliness that Isabel felt quite drawn toward her. "Listen please! I'm often down at Horton's. Won't you please tell me your name?"

Just for a moment the girl hesitated. Then she smiled very sweetly at her younger companion and said gently: "My name is Alice Rhodes."

"Alice Rhodes!" Isabel's face turned crimson. Alice Rhodes! That was the name of the girl whom she had been hearing about for four whole years, the most admired girl in the college class to whom her own cousin, Isabel May Stewart, belonged. Alice Rhodes had been a leader, had graduated number one the year before and had been planning to enter business. And this was she! Isabel's one cause for relief in all her sufferings was that she had apologized for a fault because it was a fault and not in deference to a reputation. That act made her able to listen with outward calm at least to the girl's leave-taking.

"Perhaps," Alice was saying, I'll see you again before long then. Horton's is full of tempting things, isn't it? Especially for me and for two of my classmates; we're all there, learning how to sell things. It certainly takes every bit of wit one has!" Then she was gone.

Isabel remained plunged in profound thought in the now nearly empty supper booth.

"Come on, Isabel, hurry and help clear up the tables, and then let's go out with the others and hear the music!" cried Emily, rushing past with a trayful of dishes. "What's the matter?

You're thinking!"

"Yes, Emily," replied Isabel, "I'm wondering if I could ever in the wide world be clever enough to sell anything."

THE STRAWBERRY AND ITS CULTURE

choose one where the snow lies deep in the winter as it affords considerable protection and moisture for the plants. It is better to be well worked in the fall, but where this cannot be done is should be performed as early in the spring as conditions will permit. The ground should be deeply dug, a liberal supply of well rotted manure thoroughly mixed and packed firm. With the rake break up all lumps and leave the surface even and fine ready for setting plants.

There are several systems of planting. The matted row, single and hedgerow, and the hill system. Where fruit of large size and superior quality is desired for private use the latter system is the best. Plants ordered from distant nurseries will some suitable for planting. The packages should be opened at once to prevent the plants from heating or drying out. They should be heeled in until they can be planted; this is done by making a V shaped trench about 8 inches deep, shake out the plants and place in a row in the trench, close together keeping the crowns level with the surface of the ground. Cover the roots with a light covering of soil and proceed to place another layer of plants until they are all heeled in and water thoroughly.

Set plants in rows 16 to 18 inches between the plants and 2½ to 3 feet between the rows. The best tool for this purpose is a dibble but a spade or trowel can be used with satisfactory results. Make holes deep enough and large enough to hold the roots without doubling them. With the left hand take a plant, holding it by the crown, drop the roots into the hole keeping the crown level with the surface of the ground; with the right hand, below and the crown of the plant just level with the ground.

Remove all blossoms and runners on Standard varieties the first year. Remove to first blooms on Ever-bearing varieties and all but two runners which should be laid lengthwise in the row. Immediately after setting commence cultivation not more than two or three inches deep and as close to the plants as possible. Keep the surface loose, free from weeds and stones. Staked straw or stable manure containing a large proportion of straw round the plants, this will help retain moisture and keep the fruit off the ground.

If during a spell of hot, dry weather the plants begin to suffer for want of water, the watering must be resorted to, the best plan is to make a hole with a posthole auger or crowbar, between every two plants, from 1 to 1½ feet deep and fill with water, preferably in the evening, when the water has soaked in fill up the holes.

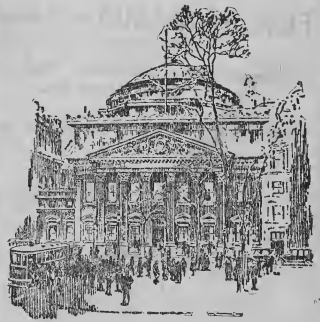

Strawberry plants for all their size produce a very large amount of fruit and they naturally require a corresponding amount of plant food. Commercial fertilizers are good and easy of application, but a simpler less expensive and more satisfactory plan is to take a pail of fresh manure, put it into a gunny sack and allow it to soak in a barrel of water, making liquid manure. On applying take 1 gallon of the liquid and dilute with 6 gallons of water and apply as advised for watering during the fruiting season.

About the end of September the ground should get a good watering, which will put these plants in good shape for going into the winter.

After freeze up put on a heavy mulch of stable manure at least 6 inches deep, which should not be removed until growth has started the following spring when it should be forked in and cultivation commenced to conserve moisture and keep down weeds.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS Industrial and Resources Department

WILL RECEIVE APPLICATIONS FROM FARMERS PREPARED TO ENAGE FARM HELP (MALE OR FEMALE) FOR A PERIOD OF ONE YEAR AT RATES OF WAGES CURRENT AT TIME OF ENGAGEMENT

Farmers are to make application on a form that may be obtained from C.N.R. Station Agents. C.N.R. representatives overseas will endeavour to secure the class of help required in Great Britain (Belgium, Switzerland, Denmark, Holland, Norway and Sweden). The Government of these countries stand ready to assist this class of their people to emigrate to Canada, but feel that they should be assured of employment for at least one year in order to gain sufficient Canadian farming experience to fit them for going on farms of their own. Farmers who are able to do so, can thus assist in colonization work by engaging help by the year. There will be no charge to the farmer for our service, nor will the farmer be required to make any cash advance for the travelling expenses of his help to the nearest railway station. The information necessarily asked for in these application forms, which will be held in strictest confidence, includes: the kind of help required—male or female—married or unmarried, date required and for how long; nationality desired; monthly wages offered; kind of work, etc.

LOCAL NOTES

Nineteen loaded cars of freight were ditched one mile west of Edgerton last Tuesday morning. With the aid of the auxiliaries from Edmonton and Biggar the lines were soon cleared for traffic.

Mothers' Day will be observed on Sunday May 14th at points in the Ribstone field; and on Sunday, May 13th in the La-Pearl field.

The winter rye has come through in good shape, and a vigorous growth has now started.

Mrs. H. Butler has returned to this district with her two sons, and is intending to take up residence here.

Mr. John Tarnag has taken a trip to the coast, we trust he will have a good time.

The generous showers of Thursday last have put the land in good shape for seeding.

Owing to floods and washouts in Manitoba the trains from the east have been arriving behind time.

A pure water white grade of clover honey at 20c a pound at Saker's.

Now that a supply of golf clubs have arrived the golf-enthusiasts are out each evening. Some converts to the game are being got. But these are quite a number who are dubious about starting in.

Mrs. L. E. Roy arrived home on Thursday last, having made a rapid recovery after her operation.

Most delicious bread is made by J. P. Fisher Chauvin. If you have not already sampled this bread you are invited to do so. It does not pay to bake your own when you can buy this bread so cheaply.

Saturday was a quiet day in town, most of the farmers being busy with spring work.

Seeding is now general in all parts of the district. Many farmers having completed quite an acreage at the end of the last week.

The Chauvin Trail Rangers are getting down to business. They held their second meeting last Thursday Evening.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Keatley were visitors to Chauvin Monday. They had motored down from Edmonton, and report the roads in fair shape.

Our good friend, the elevator man, W. Cubitt has widened the field of his activities by becoming a farmer. He has purchased the Goulet farm, and moves in in a few days. We wish him the best of fortune in his new enterprise.

We are pleased to learn that Rolande Tessier who was attending the Vermilion School of Agriculture returned with two first prizes of $5.00 each; one for sewing, and one for household administration.

Miss Coleman paid her first spring visit to Chauvin this week. She has supplemented the charms of a number of our local ladies with the latest spring millinery. It's a case of "charming", "more charming", "most charming."

The Chauvin scholars enjoyed an unexpected holiday last Monday. We understand they appreciate their teachers getting married—when it brings a day of freedom to the scholars we mean.

Reports of dry soil begin to come into this office. Whilst last week's rain was appreciated greatly, more rain is needed.

Mrs. C. G. Furryan has returned from a visit to friends in Edmonton.

Swanstrom and Gilbertson have at present over 2500 lbs of pork on hand to be cured for customers and can handle any amount of curing that comes in. They will be curing meat all summer. L. Swanstrom has had seven years experience in this line of work in Sweden and is thoroughly

IN CREAM BUYING

NEW BUYING SYSTEM

Means Thousand of Dollars for Dairy Farmers

ALL CREAM-BUYING MIDDLEMEN have been eliminated by us—no agents, boosters, or solicitors. They used to cost us about 2c per pound butterfat. The money will in future be given by us to the dairy farmers in HIGHER CREAM PRICES.

ALL OUR CREAM PRICES IN FUTURE will be on a F.O.B. basis, and the amount we formerly paid for express charges will be ADDED BY US ON TO THE PRICE WE PAY FOR CREAM. This new policy equalizes the burden. The man who sends us a full can does not have to bear part of the burden of the man who ships only half a can.

A Handy Can to have in the House—Now!

Not only good for floors, but useful on all interior woodwork where a hard wearing gloss finish is desirable.

Housecleaning time should start with dusting and scrubbing; and finish with PAINT. There's nothing else in all the world that will do so much at so little cost.

When you paint, paint with good paint. Anything else is poor economy: spells disappointment when the first gloss wears off.
